Connecting the Global Missions Community

PLATFORM OVERVIEW

WHO WE ARE

A nonprofit built by people who've been there.

CoMission is an Arizona nonprofit corporation founded by Paul Cords — Founder and CEO. He has served in missions all over the world, in many functions: going, giving, and serving on his church's board — where he saw the sending organizations up close and felt the full weight the outreach director carries. Having seen the field from every angle, one thing became clear: the missions community needs a service that connects us all. So he built it.

CoMission is a tax-exempt, fully functional 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization. But CoMission's credibility was never going to come from paperwork. It comes from lived experience on every side of the table — and the conviction that no missionary should go unseen while willing hearts stand ready to help.

MISSION

CoMission connects the global missions community — donors, missionaries, and sending organizations — around shared prayer, generosity, and partnership, making it easier for people to find and fuel the mission work God has called them to support.

VISION

A world where every missionary and mission-sending organization has visibility, and every believer with a heart to give or pray has a direct, trustworthy way in — closing the gap between capacity to help and the people doing the work on the ground.

THE PROBLEM WE SOLVE

The gap between capacity to help and the work.

Thousands of faithful missionaries do the work every day — often unseen, often under-supported. Thousands of believers hold real capacity: prayer, encouragement, generosity. But there is no direct, trustworthy way in. So the two sides miss each other.

- Missionaries lack visibility. Their stories live in scattered newsletters and inboxes. The people who would champion them never find them.
- Donors lack a trustworthy path. Generosity wants a name, a face, a need it can verify — not a black box.
- The Church lacks a shared table. Prayer happens in isolation. Collaboration between ministries doing similar work rarely starts, because they never meet.

CoMission exists to close that gap: one verified directory, one shared Prayer Wall, one place where a missionary's need meets a donor's heart — and where the people who send them can shepherd it all.

The Missionary

Visibility is oxygen for mission work. CoMission gives every missionary and sending organization a living profile — not a static listing, but a home base the community can find, follow, and rally around.

Profile — your verified home base

Claim it with your own domain — the one thing only the real you controls — and CoMission builds a living profile: who you are, where you serve, the work you're called to. One trusted record that every prayer request, story, and Think Tank points back to.

Newsletter — your newsletter already does the work

Add CoMission to the send list once. New issues arrive as editable profile and prayer suggestions — and nothing publishes until you approve it. Keep sending the newsletter you already send; the profile takes care of itself.

Prayer requests — straight to the Wall

Post a need from your profile and it goes live to the whole community in real time. Real names, real places, carried by real people the same day — no algorithm deciding who sees it.

Think Tanks — respond to the strongest connections

A small set of 75%+ matches built from documented work, organization location, trip evidence, and umbrella relationships. You see the evidence behind every match — and as a participating institution, you accept or decline every invitation. Nothing is ever assigned to you.

Missionaries first, donors second. The platform is built around the worker — everyone else is here to serve them.

The Donor

Generosity follows relationship. CoMission turns giving from a transaction into a connection — donors discover real workers, pray for them by name, and follow the fruit over time.

Find Orgs — find the people already doing the work

Search 1,020+ verified Christian missions organizations by name, specialty, or place — try clean water, children, Tanzania. Every profile is real, with a verified official website. Suggestions and filters make the directory easy to explore; the dead ends were purged long ago.

Hope Scrolling — look at what the Lord has done

A living feed of wins, prayer needs, and Kingdom collaborations moving through the network — newest first, filterable by Updates, Prayer, Think Tanks, and Scripture. This is where generosity catches fire: you don't just read about the work, you watch it unfold.

Prayer Wall — pray together, from wherever you are

Carry a request, mark that you prayed, and keep up with the organizations you follow. Filter by Favorites, My prayers, and Region. Prayer isn't the prelude to giving here — it's the first gift.

Profile — your front row seat

Your favorites, the requests you've carried, and suggested organizations — each suggestion showing its work with clear think-tank and likeness reasoning, so you understand the fit before you give a single dollar.

Transparency over transactions. Every profile, every story, every match shows its work — so trust is earned, not assumed.

The Outreach Director

Churches send workers, then lose sight of them. CoMission gives outreach directors a portfolio view of every supported missionary — and the tools to shepherd them well.

Portfolio — people & teams

Build your care roster by adding existing organization tiles straight from the directory — missionary profiles, ministry teams, and sending organizations, all on the same trusted record. Or write to the portfolio directly. Every worker you support, in one living view.

Encourage — encouragement that reaches them

The outreach director leads encouragement on CoMission: send direct messages of support that land with the worker — not into the void, not through a chain of forwards. Timed to their real updates and prayer requests.

Ideas — every connection has a next step

Collaboration ideas generated by the matching algorithm — or shaped by you. See where your workers' ministries overlap with others doing similar work, refine the introduction, and let each organization accept or decline for itself.

Events — every meeting has a next step

Track proposed calls, accepted meetings, and completed collaborations across the organizations you support. Meeting suggestions arrive with the relationship context attached — so nothing falls through the cracks.

The outreach director never replaces the organization's voice — only organizations post prayer requests and accept Think Tanks. This seat is for stewardship: watching over the workers your church has sent.

How they're derived.

A Think Tank is a curated collaboration between ministries — a shared table where organizations doing similar work pray, learn, and build together. They are never random, and never a mystery number. Every match is derived from real data:

1

The Match Index

An honest, scientific score built from location, years of work, organization size, area of focus, prayer-request similarity, and challenge-to-triumph patterns. Every input is visible — the number always shows its work.

2

Live content signals

Newsletter posts feed matching in real time — ministries writing about the same work, with the same tags, find each other as the story unfolds.

3

The same-day, same-city rule

Two organizations posting wins from the same city on the same day trigger an urgent Think Tank — to celebrate, pray, and collaborate while the moment is live.

4

Umbrella link-ups

Organizations serving under shared sending umbrellas match on their common roots — while umbrella profiles themselves stay informational-only and never post.

5

A high bar

Only the strongest matches surface publicly. The public hub shows proven connections — curation keeps every Think Tank worth everyone's time.

How they're decided.

Derivation finds the connection. Decision honors the people in it. No Think Tank is ever assigned from above — the organizations involved always say yes first.

- Invitations go to institutions. Donors can see Think Tanks and follow the fruit — but invitations go to the organizations, and only an organization can accept.
- "Why this connection" leads. Every Think Tank opens with the reasoning — the shared work, the shared place, the shared need — before anything else.
- Dreams grounded in data. Each Think Tank carries a collaboration dream — mentorship, trip collaboration, curriculum sharing, a challenge meeting its solution — generated from that connection's own match data, never canned.
- An agenda with a soul. Opening prayer inviting Jesus in, get-to-know-you, needs and solutions, specific stories linking the groups, closing prayer with follow-up plans.
- Integrity rules hold. Guardrails protect real relationships — for example, workers from the same team who already meet regularly are never paired alone.

Every Think Tank description is one cohesive read — grounded in the organizations' real information, ending on a home run for the Kingdom work described. If it doesn't serve the workers, it doesn't happen.
